1 The ruler

A PDF may stand in a collection on its own, with no note of its name.
Its pages are read in place, and its reading state is kept apart.
A note is attached to it by naming the file, and need not be named after it.

2 The gap

The gap between passes grows with each pass made on time.
A passage boxed on this page becomes a section of the attached note.

3 The end

Nothing is ever written into this file.